

Free Access to Educational Resources for Non-Students at Lincoln University College (LUC), Malaysia

Ensure equal access for all women and men to affordable and quality education and promote lifelong learning opportunities for all.

Lincoln University College (LUC), Malaysia, as part of its commitment to Sustainable Development Goal 4 (Quality Education), is dedicated to providing inclusive and equitable educational opportunities not only to its enrolled students but also to the wider community. The university actively promotes lifelong learning, digital inclusion, and open access to knowledge through various initiatives that extend educational resources to individuals who are not formally enrolled at LUC.

Key Initiatives and Evidence

3.1. Open Access to Library and Learning Resources

Lincoln University College Central Library provides public access to academic resources, reference materials, journals, and e-books upon request.

The university's LUC Digital Repository hosts a collection of open-access academic papers, student theses, and faculty research publications accessible to the public through the university website.

External researchers, community members, and school students are often allowed to use library facilities for academic purposes with prior approval.
